Description :

PDF-5863d | One of the major objectives of tax treaties has been the avoidance of international double taxation. This is generally accomplished through the agreement of each country to limit, in specified situations set out in double tax treaties, its right to tax income earned from its territory by residents of another country. The OECD Model Tax Treaty, other model conventions, and the bilateral treaties... Source Versus Residence: Problems Arising From the Allocation of Taxing Rights in Tax Treaty Law and Possible Alternatives (Eucotax Series on European Taxation)
